Buckeye pride.

Health priorities.

The Ohio State University College of Nursing is answering its calling to care for the LGBTQIA+ community.

We are proud to sponsor the 2024 Transforming Care Conference and to “carry the torch” with you to advocate for equality and respect in health care.

Our college is leading research in support of the LGBTQIA+ population, including:

- Conducting rigorous research that advances the understanding, visibility and well-being of sexual and gender minority (SGM) people
- Shaping policies, practices and interventions to address the challenges faced by SGM communities
- Addressing health disparities to ensure equitable access to quality and safe care for all

Ethan Morgan, PhD, founder and director of Sexual and Gender Minority Research Collaborative

Ethan Morgan, PhD, leads the multidisciplinary Sexual and Gender Minority Research Collaborative. His research focuses on HIV/STIs and broader health outcomes among LGBTQIA+ older adults.

The Collaborative seeks to expand research support systems and build a community of scientists and advocates dedicated to changing healthcare for the better.

If you are interested in learning more and joining the Collaborative, connect with Dr. Morgan at go.osu.edu/sgmcollaborative.

LIVESTREAMING PROVIDED BY

On behalf of the Equitas Health Institute, welcome to the 9th Annual Transforming Care Conference!

Each year, the Transforming Care Conference brings together healthcare providers, researchers, activists, and community members who share a commitment to LGBTQ+ and HIV health equity. Whether you are joining us in person or online, we encourage each attendee to learn with and from one another as we engage in these necessary and urgent conversations. Your voice is important, and we encourage your active participation.

In the past year, legislative attacks on LGBTQ+ rights — including access to quality, affirming, and often life-saving healthcare — have accelerated. In Ohio alone, lawmakers continue to push for draconian measures that unjustly target and stigmatize our communities. Such initiatives include forced outing in public schools; bans on drag and other forms of queer expression; bans on participation in school sports by transfeminine athletes; and bans on gender-affirming care, to name a few. In addition, Equitas Health and its community partners continue to advocate against all existing laws that criminalize HIV.

The courage, strength, and activism from the early years of the AIDS crisis continues to inspire the fight for equity and justice. That is why this year's TCC theme, "Carrying the Torch," resonates in this critical moment. Through dynamic workshops and programs, our theme invites us to look closely at the rich tapestry of LGBTQ+ and HIV/AIDS activism – past, present, and future. We will explore the intersections of identity, health, and social justice, keeping in mind the struggles and triumphs of our communities. Our theme reminds us that our work is not done.

This year, we are fortunate to welcome Alejandro Varela, a National Book Award Finalist and an important literary voice for our time. A public health storyteller, his fictional work looks at the real-life impact of racism, income inequality, class conflict, gentrification, sexuality, and heterosexism. One reviewer wrote that Varela's stories "dispense uncomfortable truths that everyone thinks about but won't address out loud."

What our keynote speaker has in common with Equitas Health and the Equitas Health Institute is a strong commitment to ending the disparities in healthcare access for LGBTQ+ communities. Whether you are here at the Transforming Care Conference for the first time or have joined us each of the past nine years, we hope you will leave with new tools to help you better provide and advocate for equitable LGBTQ+ and HIV care and services.

We are thankful to all attendees, organizers, presenters, volunteers, sponsors, exhibitors, providers, and others who make this event so meaningful. Equitas Health and the Equitas Health Institute are honored to be in community with you for today—learning together and transforming care.

With gratitude and solidarity,

About Transforming Care Conference

The annual Transforming Care Conference (TCC) brings together healthcare providers, activists, and community members who share a commitment to LGBTQ+ and HIV health equity. TCC inspires action-focused conversations about the issues that matter most to our communities. With both in-person and virtual attendance options, the conference unites a vibrant mix of attendees and presenters who elevate each other's voices and lived experiences.

2024 Theme

The 2024 Transforming Care Conference theme, "Carrying the Torch," honors the courage, strength, and activism that grew out of the early years of the AIDS crisis. It celebrates those groups that rose up from the grassroots to meet the needs of people living with or impacted by HIV/AIDS. AIDS Resource Center Ohio, the Tobias Project, Columbus AIDS Task Force, David's House of Compassion, Dayton Area AIDS Task Force, Metropolitan Residential Services, Ohio AIDS Coalition, and many others passed the torch to Equitas Health. Their care and solidarity still guide and inspire our work to end HIV/AIDS and provide affirming care for all.

"Carrying the Torch" captures the essence of the 9th annual Transforming Care Conference. Through dynamic workshops and programs, our theme invites us to look closely at the rich tapestry of LGBTQ+ and HIV/AIDS activism – past, present, and future. We will explore the intersections of identity, health, and social justice, keeping in mind the struggles and triumphs of our communities. Our theme reminds us that our work is not done. New challenges rise up each day as state legislatures seek to limit or deny access to lifesaving care for trans and gender-nonconforming people, women, and others.

We come to TCC as doctors, nurses, social workers, activists, researchers, and community members ready to learn and to act. Together, we carry the torch of hope, strength, and activism that has lighted our path for 40 years.

About Equitas Health - Our History

In 1984, a grave new threat knocked on humanity's door. We answered the way humans have throughout history: United and ready to fight. Relatively little was known about HIV/AIDS at the time. But we knew our loved ones in the LGBTQ+ community were getting sick and dying, and we knew the resources in our battle were lacking.

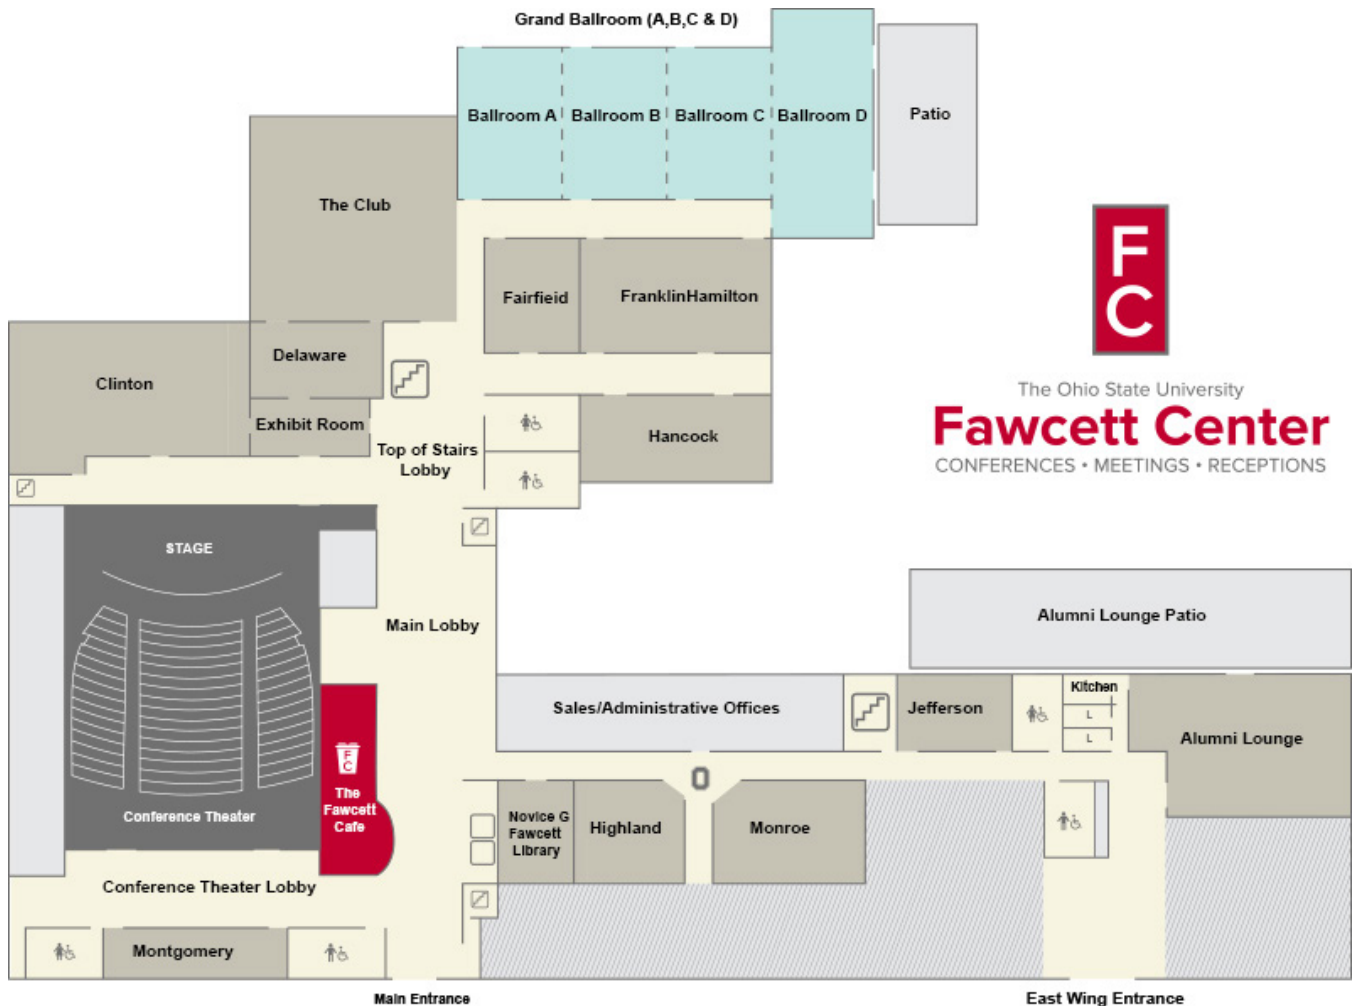

So we gathered in living rooms and around kitchen tables, caring for the sick in any way we could. Soon, this grassroots movement spread across the state and a collective formed. A flicker of hope was ignited. Today, we have a new name, and our mission has grown in scope to providing healthcare for all.

We're still united and even stronger in our collective power. Today, Equitas Health is a nonprofit community healthcare system. We are one of the nation's largest LGBTQ+ and HIV/AIDS-serving organizations, serving tens of thousands of patients in Ohio, Texas, Kentucky, and West Virginia. Our legacy is comprised of the following organizations: AIDS Foundation of Dayton, AIDS Foundation Miami Valley, AIDS Resource Center Ohio, BRAVO, Columbus AIDS Task Force, David's House of Compassion, Dayton Area AIDS Task Force, Metropolitan Residential Services, and Ohio AIDS Coalition.

About The Equitas Health Institute

The Equitas Health Institute is the education, research, and patient empowerment division of Equitas Health, focused on reducing LGBTQ+, HIV, and BIPOC health disparities through educational initiatives that engage providers, corporate partners, and community stakeholders; original research and research collaborations with University and public partners; and action-inspiring and community-building events around the health issues that matter most to our communities

CONFERENCES • MEETINGS • RECEPTIONS

If you need to unplug for a bit...

An all-day conference can be overstimulating. It's okay to need a break between sessions and events. To ensure a comfortable experience for all TCC attendees, the Club Room will be designated as a Low-Volume Room during breakout sessions. This space is located across the Ballroom. The Low-Volume Room will be marked with a sign after breakfast. The quiet room will be open after breakfast and will be available between the hours of 9:00 AM and 5:00 PM.

You can work, think, chill out or nap in the Low-Volume Room. You can listen to headphones and you are also welcome to use computers and phones – provided your devices have their sound muted. We also invite you to follow the live-streamed conference proceedings through the Whova® app while hanging out in our Low-Volume Room.

All-gender restrooms will be marked and available throughout the conference.

Keynote Speaker | Alejandro Varela

“We’re all pieces in a massive puzzle. The work that came before us allows us to see the picture with more clarity, but the work continues until every piece is in place. Our liberation has to be collective in order to be complete and long-lasting. It’s an honor to participate in an event that celebrates and upholds the tradition of health with dignity and equity.”

Alejandro Varela is a National Book Award Finalist and an important literary voice for our time. A public health storyteller, his fictional work looks at the real-life impact of racism, income inequality, class conflict, gentrification, sexuality, and heterosexism. One reviewer wrote that Varela’s stories “dispense uncomfortable truths that everyone thinks about but won’t address out loud.”

The child of immigrant Salvadoran and Colombian parents, Varela grew up in a small, working-class town on Long Island. As a youth, he often had to translate complex subjects for his Spanish-speaking family. This sparked an interest in language and in connecting people to one another and ideas. Varela went on to get a master’s degree in public health and worked as a cancer researcher at the Mount Sinai School of Medicine. He also began to write fiction to raise awareness of public health issues. His background in public health and experiences as a queer person of color living in a highly gentrified part of New York City, gave him plenty of material for his writing.

“Studying public health helped me to see our society’s failings clearly, and more importantly, it helped me to see the paths for improving it.”

His debut novel, The Town of Babylon, was a finalist for the National Book Award and a nominee for the PEN America Open Book Award. This coming-of-age story looks at race, sexuality, class identity, and the need for the book’s main character, a gay Latinx professor, to confront his past. One reviewer described it as “a finely-crafted literary scalpel with two edges, one that cuts through the layers of a dying body politic and another that clears arteries blocking the way to the heart of personal and political health: community.”

Varela’s second novel, The People Who Report More Stress, is a collection of interconnected short stories that blend humor and social commentary to show how race, class, and difference impact and shape relationships. The New York Times called it “a master class in analyzing the unspoken.”

Varela’s writing and presentations focus on the intersections of public health and fiction, the need for more queer love stories in literature, and the lens through which he sees the world. He holds a Master of Public Health from the University of Washington, with a concentration in Community-Oriented Public Health Practice (COPHP). He taught graduate-level classes in policy advocacy and undergraduate courses in nursing and in public health and film at Long Island University.

His work has appeared in The Point Magazine, Georgia Review, Boston Review, Harper’s, The New Republic, and The Offing. Varela is an editor-at-large of Apogee Journal, a New York-based literary magazine that engages with identity politics, including race, gender, sexuality, class, and ability.
